

UrbanScope

e-Journal of the Urban-Culture Research Center, OCU

Editorial Note

It is our great pleasure to publish UrbanScope Vol. 11, which includes the translation of a Japanese paper by Masafumi Kitamura, titled “Trends in Research on Bruno Taut: Bruno Taut as a Transcultural Architect and Theorist,” and a research note by Haruka Kato, titled “The Use of Lakes as Natural Resources in Late Medieval England: A Study on Lake Windermere, the Lake District.” We believe that both papers will be of great interest to many readers who majored not only in European history but also in other disciplines. We hope that we will continue to publish excellent papers that reach many people overseas, which is an advantage online journals have.

For several months now, people worldwide have been suffering due to the COVID-19 pandemic, which has had a tremendous impact on people’s lives in Japan as well. We sincerely wish peace for people everywhere and hope that they are able to resume their normal lives at the earliest.
